Hirschsprung Gorge (Deer Leap) in the Black Forest's Höllental Valley is considered one of the most haunted and storied locations in the region, primarily associated with the legend of a Headless Horseman. I'm not talking about the Headless Horseman of Sleepy Hollow, I'm talking about the Headless Horseman of Hirschsprung! In 1975, when I was stationed with the US Army in Germany, I went to the Black Forest. I was fascinated with the story of the Flaming Man. There is a story that on one particular day in the Black Forest, people were actually witnessing a man that was completely on fire flying around the Black Forest. Finally, the Flaming Man landing on the steeple of a church and the villagers started throwing rocks at this strange humanoid. The Flaming Man flew off, never to be seen again. From this story, I can only wonder if the people of Marvel Comics captured this idea and created the Human Torch? This incident occurred in the 16th Century. The Black Forest was settled with numerous small villages, farms, and monastic settlements during the 1500s. While often perceived as a dark, untouched wilderness in folklore, the area was actively inhabited, with many towns featuring half-timbered houses (fachwerk) that date back to the medieval period, such as Schiltach. Schiltach is a historic, picturesque town in the Black Forest region of Baden-Württemberg, Germany, which is another town being overrun by spirits. The town of Schiltach is haunted by the "Dark Lady". Mia Meier, a visitor witnessed a woman in very dark clothes gliding down a narrow street and then vanishing. Some people from the town have seen three ghostly children playing with marbles, laughing and then disappearing.

The Haunting of the Headless Horseman
Locals and paranormal enthusiasts identify the gorge as the territory of the Headless Horseman of Hirschsprung. The Headless Horseman is said to be a nobleman cursed for his cruelty during his life. He now gallops endlessly through the Höllental Valley mist, seeking the peace and forgiveness he denied to others. When the wind shifts, witnesses claim they can hear the sound of hooves striking stone, even when no rider is visible. The atmosphere in the narrow gorge is often described as "suffocating in its silence". Leopold Schmitt from Hamburg, Germany heard the Headless Horseman say: "I seek peace!" Leopold saw the Headless Horseman gallop away and then vanish into the mist.

The Legend of the "Deer Leap"
The name "Hirschsprung" (Deer Leap) itself comes from a centuries-old legend rather than a haunting. According to folklore, a knight from nearby Falkenstein Castle was hunting a stag in the valley. Driven by mortal fear, the stag made a massive leap across the gorge to escape its pursuer. At the time of the legend, the gorge was only about roughly 30 feet wide. While the jump seems impossible today, a stag can make downward leaps of up to 40 feet. To commemorate this event, a bronze stag statue weighing 771 lbs stands on a rocky outcrop 2,624 feet above the narrowest point of the valley.

Atmosphere of the Höllental Valley
The Höllental, or "Hell Valley," is a deep, narrow gorge with rock walls rising up to 130 meters. Its name and natural features contribute to its spooky reputation. Beyond the Headless Horseman, the broader Black Forest is often linked to tales of werewolves, witches, and "Der Grossmann" (the tall man), a horribly disfigured figure with many arms. Some locals believe the forest "remembers" its history, leading to reports of strange lights, voices in the fog, and an undeniable energy in places like Hirschsprung. Let's take a closer look at some of the legendary paranormal stories that originate from the Black Forest. Just to let you know that when I visited the Black Forest in 1975, I did not witness anything paranormal. In fact, the Black Forest seemed very peaceful. Maybe I was just lucky.

Werewolves of the Black Forest
Local folklore describes the forest as home to lurking werewolves that emerge after dark, alongside other mythical beings like the Forest King and headless horsemen. In German-speaking Europe, "werewolf-sorcerers" were a common fixture of historical folklore and were often cited during witch trials. Theodor Weber of Bremerhaven says that when he was visiting the Black Forest, he heard the howling of werewolves. Theodor also had binoculars and while looking through the binoculars he saw a bi-pedal hairy creature running through the woods. Theodor believes he saw a werewolf.

The Witches of the Black Forest
Many "witches" were healers or wise women who used natural remedies, but they were misunderstood and targeted during intense persecution in the 16th/17th centuries. Tales often feature Waldhexen (forest witches) like Frau Trude, who could manipulate nature and served as warnings against arrogance and curiosity. They are portrayed as stewards of the land, deeply connected to the forest and its creatures. The legends of the Black Forest, which include tales of nixieselves, and witches, provided inspiration for the Brothers Grimm. Today, the "Schwarzwald Hexe" is a popular figure in local culture, often represented in Fastnacht (carnival) traditions and tourism, blending folklore with the region's dark, atmospheric reputation.

Nixieselves of the Black Forest

A nixie is a shape-shifting water spirit originating from Germanic and Scandinavian folklore, often characterized as a malevolent or mischievous entity inhabiting rivers, lakes, and streams. They are frequently described as possessing the ability to take on human form, often appearing as beautiful women, yet are typically betrayed by a small detail, such as a wet hem on their clothing. Nixieselves are very interesting and HPI (Halo Paranormal Investigations) received a report about a water elemental that was spotted in the Sacramento River by a man from Carmichael, CA who was out fishing on his boat. He claims the water elemental known as a "Wetlash" was holding a fish. Is it possible that German immigrants who came to California, may have brought with them a water elemental?

Der Grossmann (Tall Man)
Der Grossmann (The Tall Man) is a legendary, shadowy figure from 16th-century Black Forest folklore, often described as a disfigured, unnaturally tall, multi-limbed entity that stalks and kidnaps misbehaved children who enter the woods at night. He is often associated with the modern Slender Man mythos. Described as extremely tall and thin with multiple upper limbs (often five or six), allowing him to hide behind trees. He is described as having pearl-orbed eyes or a faceless, smiling appearance. Stalks children until they confess their misdeeds to a parent or abducts them if they are found deep in the woods, leaving them in the forest, where they can never be found. Often cited as the historical basis for the internet-era Slender Man urban legend, which emerged in 2009. Later tales suggest he appeared during wars, stalking soldiers, and is worshipped by a fictional cult known as "The All-Seeing". The legend functions as a classic "bogeyman" tale designed to keep children out of the dense, treacherous Black Forest. Lina Koch and Wilhelmina Braun of Munich claim that when they were children playing in the woods, they saw a very thin man watching them. As adults, they think of that day and believe they saw The Tall Man.

The Haunted Office: The Tapping Cabinets
By Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective

Below is a blast from the past. The night when I investigated a haunted government office.

I have been working a lot of overtime in my real job. I have a friend, who also works a lot of overtime in his real job. My friend knows I am a paranormal investigator. I will not be disclosing the name of my friend, nor where he works at, because he could find himself in a lot of trouble for having me go into his building after working hours, plus, I could probably get into trouble. Anyway, let's get back to the story. Here I am working at my real job, the time is about 9pm. I get a call from my friend, he asks: "Paul, are you working overtime, or are you at home?" Paul: (deep sigh) "Working overtime." Friend: "Then Paul, get your a-- over here, it's happening now!" Paul: Okay, I just have a couple things to get out, and I will zip over there!"

My friend claims that the office building where he works at is haunted. Some of the employees have claimed that trays that are supposed to go in a certain way are moved backwards in the morning. If the employees discuss that the office building is haunted, they could get into trouble by management. My friend a workaholic works late hours at this establishment and says at times, the cabinets in 4 cubicles will make a distinct loud tapping sound. It only happens ever so often, but when it does happen, it will last for up to a couple of hours. So, here I am zipping over to his building, somewhere in downtown Sacramento. My friend sneaks me into his office area and lo and behold, I hear the tapping sounds on one of the cabinets in a cubicle. I enter the cubicle where the tapping sounds are originating from and the tapping sounds switch over to the next cubicle's cabinet. I run over to the next cubicle, and it moves again into another cubicle and then another cubicle. The tapping sounds on the cabinets go around 4 cubicles. So, when you reach one cubicle cabinet where the tapping sounds are heard, it moves to the next cubicle's cabinet and so on and so on. It was the weirdest thing, I have ever witnessed. You could even see the cabinets shake. It sounded like a person with long fingernails was actually tapping the cabinets. I was in this office for a period of 20 minutes and chased the tapping sound during that whole time, trying to catch up with it. I could peek into the next cubicle and see the cabinets shake from the tapping, but as soon as I arrived in that cubicle, it already shifted into the next cubicle. I asked my friend, what the history of this place was, and he said most employees think it's the ghost of a former female employee that died by sitting in her parked running car, that was in her garage. She died of inhaling hydrogen sulfide gas. She committed suicide, because she found out her husband was having an affair with one of her co-workers at this building.

The tapping of the cabinets happens ever so often. I was fortunate, because I was working late this night, when this paranormal incident occurred. I can now say that I have been on over 65 investigations and 4 have been significant, where either I heard something, saw something, or was touched by something. On this night, I was able to witness the paranormal by actually hearing the tapping and seeing the cabinets shake. For the tapping to run from me, shows some kind of intelligent paranormal activity.

I took a dozen pictures in the area of the 4 haunted cubicles and captured a lot of orb activity. On one EVP recording, I captured a woman's soft voice say "why?" My friend says that the voice does sound like the deceased state worker. Thank you to my friend, for allowing me to witness this. Either I witnessed the paranormal this night or witnessed fast moving cockroaches that can move swiftly from one cabinet to another. I have no explanation for this activity. I am baffled and dumbfounded.

Visalia, California, has several reputed haunted locations, largely centered around historic spots in Tulare County. Common reports include a ghost soldier at the Visalia Public Cemetery, eerie activity at the downtown Fox Theatre, and paranormal sightings at Mooney's Grove Park and the Rocky Hills caves. I once lived in Visalia as a little boy and heard many stories. When I got older, I had the opportunity to visit some of the haunted areas of Visalia. My group HPI (Halo Paranormal Investigations) conducted 5 investigations in Visalia and one of the investigations was a private home. A private home that was haunted by a demonic force. The only thing we captured was some orb photos and orbs can be almost anything. Orb photos are not considered as evidence. I conducted a Roman Catholic house blessing. I did a follow-up with the clients 2 weeks later and they said my cleansing worked. The demonic entity was gone. Below are some of the haunted places in Visalia. Some of the locations, we visited and conducted an impromptu investigation.

Visalia Public Cemetery:
Reports of a Union soldier in blue, as well as the sound of a baby crying at night. Velma Reynolds, Paranormal Investigator claims she was touched at the cemetery. She felt a hand rubbing her arm and legs. Three EVPs were captured, that sounded like growling. I consider the EVPs as inconclusive, no words were identifiable. We interviewed a local named Harold "Harry" Richardson who claims that he saw the full body apparition of the Union soldier. Harry claims it appeared, looked at him and then vanished. Local historians share legends of a Union soldier in blue who supposedly appears before vanishing. He is theorized to be a murder victim from the nearby Civil War-era Camp Babbitt.

Fox Theatre:
Visitors and staff have reported seeing a figure in the wings and feeling an eerie presence. The Visalia Fox Theatre is widely considered to be haunted and has been the subject of several paranormal investigations. The theater itself embraces this history by hosting Ghost Tours in October to explore reported sightings and unexplained occurrences. The most famous story involves a woman, possibly a former dancer, who is frequently seen sitting in the upper balcony. Ghost hunters call her the Balcony Dancer. Investigators from the Tulare County Paranormal Society reported seeing a "shadow figure" near the main entrance and witnessing activity in the upper balcony. During a 2016 investigation by a ghost hunting group, members heard unexplained movement in the balcony near the projection room and captured "whispered conversations" on electronic voice recorders (EVP). Sudden drops of temperature have occurred in the wings of the stage after hours.

Orange Lady at Mooney's Grove Park, Visalia, CA

Mooney's Grove Park:
Often cited in local lore for strange activity near the trails. The Orange Lady has been seen gliding or floating through the park. Ghost hunters call her the Orange Lady because she appears to be wearing an orange cape. Capes have been worn for centuries as protection against the elements. By the 18th century, bright red "scarlet capes" were popular among well-bred women as a sign of high status. HPI did an investigation at the park and one of my investigators, a psychic medium claims that she saw the Orange Lady and claims that her outfit and cape is red in some areas, while the rest of the clothing looks orange. At night, the park is rumored to have "spooky vibes," with some locals claiming it was once a meeting place for occult groups. One of the occult groups that met at the park was the House of Decarabia. Decarabia (also called Carabia) is a demon and, according to The Lesser Key of Solomon, a Great Marquis of Hell, or a King and Earl according to the original Latin version of the Pseudomonarchia Daemonum (these were somehow left out of the English translation by Reginald Scot). He has thirty legions of demons under his command. Decarabia knows the virtues of all herbs and precious stones and can change into all birds and sing and fly like them before the conjurer. He is depicted as appearing as a pentagram star, changing into a man under the conjurer's request. According to Fresno resident Daniel Malen, he witnessed the occult group in the park calling on Decarabia's name, this was in 2011.

Santa Fe Tracks:
Known for reported paranormal activity on the east side of town. People have heard strange whistling sounds. Some people even claim that they can hear a man singing and whistling to the tune of Oh! Suzanna or The Last Rose of Summer. A paranormal investigator from Colusa County says that when he was at the tracks, he observed odd looking purple orbs flying around and could see the orbs with his eyes.

— Long Legs at Rocky Hills - Visalia, CA —

Rocky Hills:
Local lore suggests that caves on Rocky Hill are haunted by Native American spirits. Rumors persist among locals about occult gatherings or "coven" activities taking place near these caves, though these are often dismissed as unsubstantiated.
Some visitors have reported seeing a "ghost-like" figure near a pair of balancing rocks in the area. This ghost is known as the Balancing Rock Ghost. Several people have seen this ghost. There are informal reports of "unnatural" or "creature-like" sightings on the dark, winding roads surrounding the hill. A paranormal investigator who encountered this creature says it has a spider look, with 4 long legs. The creature (Long Legs) walks close to the ground and walks on all 4 legs like a spider. Franklin Willows of Placer County says he thinks he encountered the creature. He didn't see the creature, but heard an odd hissing sound. Rocky Hill is a significant Yokuts archaeological preserve containing ancient rock art and bedrock mortars. It has been a sacred site for the Southern Valley Yokuts for over 2,000 years. Much of the hill is protected land; for example, visiting certain archaeological areas officially requires permission from the Tulare County Archaeological Society. Some locals theorize that the spider creature known as Long Legs was summoned by ancient Native Americans to protect and watch over Rocky Hills.

Zalud House Museum (Porterville):
Nearby, this location is known for a chair with a bullet hole and associated stories. Some people have seen a cloudy mist floating around the museum. The sordid history of the museum is that in 1917, orange grower William Brookes (John Zalud's son-in-law) was murdered in this chair while sitting in the lobby of the former Pioneer Hotel. He was shot four times and killed by a married woman named Julia Howe, who objected to what he was saying about her after bragging he had an affair with her.

The Depot Restaurant
This historic restaurant is one of Visalia's most famous "haunted" spots. Former employees and guests have reported hearing a woman's laughter in the main dining room, feeling a malevolent presence in the banquet room (the "Baggage Room"), and experiencing flickering lights that electricians could not explain.

Downtown Alleyways
Local paranormal investigators claim the area between Highway 198 and Murray/Goshen is a "hotbed" for activity. Reported experiences include disembodied voices, the sound of high heels walking, and even objects being thrown. The activity is attributed to the city's history, which dates back to 1852 and included a bordello, jail, courthouse, and Fort Visalia.

Performing Arts Theater
Many local performers and stage crew members consider this theater to be haunted, with various stories of unexplained sightings and sounds passed down through "theater kids" over the years. Visalia has several reportedly haunted theaters, most notably the Ice House Theatre (home to the Visalia Players), which is rumored to be haunted by a ghost named "Timmy" and has a history as a potential Civil War-era morgue. Additionally, the historic Fox Theatre is reputed to have spirits, and the Rialto Theatre is said to be haunted by a 1940s pianist.

BELOW IS A “BLAST FROM THE PAST”

Onto other news. Like I said, HPI (Haunted and Paranormal Investigations International) investigates all things paranormal. Shannon 'Ms. Macabre' McCabe and I, have been looking into the legend of the Chupacabra. Since we can't find any Chupacabras in California, we are headed over to Mexico to investigate. We will be most likely in Mexico, by this November.

From our studies, it appears that the Chupacabra phenomenon originated in Puerto Rico, but has now spread out into parts of South America, Central America, Mexico and even parts of Southern Texas. On April 1989, many mutilations were discovered in Ceiba Norte, which is in the east central regions of Puerto Rico. The mutilations are credited to the mythical beast, the Chupacabra. Other strange creatures that can be associated with the Chupacabra was a strange reptilian bird that had two large fangs. One was captured when it was struck by a beam of light. The beam of light actually brought the bird down. The locales say that this Serpent Bird howled like a dog, ate raw meat and it's skin was toad like with no feathers. Only one picture of this creature exists before policeman came to the door and took this strange creature away. Could the Serpent Bird be some type of Chupacabra? The most common type of Chpacabra, are the ones that eye witnesses say has scales and has large eyes like a 'gray' alien. Could this be some military experiment gone awry? Is the military experimenting with DNA? Some historians have theorized that if Atlantis did exist, that their technology was so advanced, that the people of Atlantis may have experimented with DNA alterations that could have created our mythical beasts, such as the Centaur (half man / half horse). Why would a Centaur be created? For war purposes. A warrior that had the agility and movement of a horse and the capability to hold a weapon. What if the military is working on DNA manipulation to create a super soldier and the experiments went wrong? What if their creations escaped into the landscape of Puerto Rico? What if the military is in cahoots with the 'grays' in DNA biological technology? It does appear the military is interested in the stars, because the largest radio telescope - the Arecibo Observatory is in Puerto Rico. Everytime there are sightings of Chupacabra, it's interesting on how fast the military arrives to the scene. It's also interesting to note, that UFOs are seen coming in and out of the ocean near Puerto Rico. When a strange creature with bug eyes was seen in Varginha, Brazil crouching in the darkness, the military was there in a New York minute. The town folks say the military captured the creature and whisked it away.

Puerto Rico, the Bermuda Triangle, South America, Mexico have so many UFO sightings. Lake Titicaca is rumored to have UFO camp bases under it's waters. There is so much activity in these areas, Shannon and I, must head south to investigate for ourselves. The last time Shannon was in Mexico, she saw a horse with a huge wound in it's neck. Shannon confronted a boy who owned the horse. She asked the boy what caused the wound on his horse's neck. The boy told Shannon that the Chupacabra took a bite out of the horse's neck.

Shannon and I, plan to conduct many interviews in Mexico and actually go to some areas where the Chupacabra has been spotted. Shannon and I, once again will dabble into the world of cyptozoology. We are not just ghosthunters, we investigate ALL things paranormal. Stayed tuned!

Let's get away from the paranormal for a bit. On May 7, 2008, Wednesday, we had a big birthday party for our illustrious leader Shannon McCabe. On May 11, will be her birthday. She will be 34 years old. We held the celebration at Il Fornaio Cucina Italiana - 400 Capitol Mall. What is interesting is that this restaurant is next to the 400 Capitol Mall parking lot, which is reputed to be haunted and is the place that Shannon saw her first full body apparition. Oh no, I said I wouldn't talk about the paranormal for a bit. Let's change the topic back to her birthday. There was great food, drinks and birthday cake. I gave Shannon a nice ceramic female fairy with dragon wings & a birthday card. I picked out the fairy, because well...it's paranormal. Attended were: Jennifer Baca, Debbie Talani, Tim Hawkins, Valerie, Cindy, Kim (she was celebrating her birthday too), Kathleen, Lydia (who brought over the birthday cake for Shannon, purchased at Rick's Dessert Diner) & Jennifer Cicero - Designer of Sweet Tart Designs. Our server was the pleasant and delightful Rhonda of Il Fornaio. Afterwards we all went to the 4th Street Grille for drinks. Shannon & Jennifer Cicero showed Jennifer, Debbie and I, where they actually work at, a place called Florist Naturally. Yes, Shannon's real job is a florist and she gave us all a bouquet of flowers. I also learn this night after Shannon had a few drinks in her, that she is 'Lady En Du Tromp McCabe, Tim Hawkins is Tim 'Lourd Hawkins' and Jennifer is Jennifer 'Jezabel' Cicero. Shan, Tim and Jennifer all participate in the Renaissance Faires. They want me to visit the next faire event in Fair Oaks, which will be the last weekend in June. We thank Il Fornaio for the complimentary bottle of champagne! Shannon let's me know that ghosthunters need to unwind, by doing something normal, like celebrating her birthday! She topped off her birthday, by going to a B-52 concert with her mother the very next day! Happy birthday Shannon!

HPI has other interesting cases in the works. In October, we plan to investigate New Orleans for ghostly hauntings, zombies and voodoo! Our team will consist of Shannon McCabe, Paul Dale Roberts, Jennifer Baca and Bryan Coleman. January 2009, I will be investigating ghostly activity in Aruba. Witnesses have made claims of seeing a ghostly blonde woman on the beach. Could this be the ghost of Natalee Holloway? I guess, I will have to find out for myself.

Now a word from Celebrity Psychic Nancy Bradley:

"The Celebrities Psychic NANCY BRADLEY is just back from Washington D.C. where she is on a committee to expose and restrict fraudulent psychics from practicing. Currently there are no restrictions on the psychic community, meaning, anyone can put a shingle up and call themselves 'psychic'. The committee, which consists of real tested psychics, is demanding restrictions placed on practicing psychics to protect the public. They insist that all practicing psychics must be forced to show proof of at least a high school education, not be a felon, be fingerprinted by their state, and maintain, by testing, a yearly accuracy rate of at least 85%. BRADLEY, one of only two recognized psychic in the state of California. Her accuracy is tested at 92 to 95.4%.

While in D.C. BRADLEY'S group did energy Readings, which proved the energy at the capitol is the lowest it has been in the last 8 years. They conducted energy work to try and improve governmental understanding of unemployment, poverty, abuse and greed.
BRADLEY can be reached at WWW.NANCYBRADLEY.ORG and WWW.GOLDRUSHGHOSTS.COM "

Subject: A Strange Haunting in Folsom Sat Jan 26, 2008 3:10 pm QUOTE

I have always been a curious creature. I joined the Ordo Rosae Crucis (AMORC) aka the Rosicrucians to better understand secret societies. When I was going to college, I did a book report on cults like the Hare Krishna, Peoples' Temple, Church of Scientology and even the Church of Satan, by actually visiting these cults and talking with the members of these cults. Of course, I got an A in Sociology for actually doing my own personal investigations of these cults. The funny thing is that the Church of Scientology and the Church of Satan actually asked me to leave, because I was counteracting everything they were saying and it angered them. As a ghost writer and paranormal investigator for H.P.I. (Haunted and Paranormal Investigations) of Northern California. I want to better understand ghosts, spirits, poltergeist activity, demons, residual hauntings. How can I do this? Easy, by learning firsthand though a professional outfit like HPI.

I also sit and wonder on the existence of ghosts. Do they have jobs like living people? Do they know of the existence of God? I came up with my own theories on life after death. Here's my theory. When a person dies, they are confronted by the light. They are beckoned by deceased family and friends who try to entice them to go into the light. When they refuse, they remain on Earth. It appears that most ghosts are confined to a home, to a place that they are familiar with or even to a graveyard. Why? Perhaps in the afterlife, they have 'ghost police'. A governing force of spirits that keep them entrapped in one area, until they are ready to go into the light and reach a energy plane with other spirits. An energy plane that may be known as heaven or even hell. Perhaps some spirits or ghosts don't want to enter the light, because they are afraid that they may go into a place of damnation. A place that we learned from the preachers of our churches that talk of fire and brimstone and a lake of fire. Let's talk about demons for a minute. Now demons are completely different from ghosts. Demons that were formerly angels, have more powers than your average day ghost and can manifest any part of the world in a blink of an eye. No one seems capable of controlling demons, unless an exorcism takes place and perhaps then angels will keep the demon at bay and chase the demon away. Residual Hauntings? With residual hauntings, an intense event took place. Perhaps a murder, perhaps a rape, perhaps even a very important speech that was given to some very important people. Because of these events, a lot of untapped energy was released from the people that participated in this event. So much energy, that it left an imprint in the atmosphere and like a recorder, it plays back the event over and over again. We at times can see these events take place in a ghostly realm, but we are unable to communicate with the ghosts of this event, because they are unaware of their surroundings, they are mere holographic images in the fabric of space and time, repeating an event over and over again. How about reincarnation? Is the person with the past life memories really that person of the past? I doubt it, but perhaps they are very much in tune with the energy of a deceased person and are able to see the life of that deceased person and even contain their memories. Causing the person who thinks they were reincarnated to think that they were once that person. A reincarnated person is actually a person that is very sensitive in picking up the memories of a deceased person and living with those past memories. What is the poltergeist phenomenon? When a child, usually a young girl is going through puberty, her body is changing inside and she is able to release energy that is so intense, that it can cause knocking or rapping sounds, cabinets to pop open, glasses to fall and break. All of us have a lot of energy within our bodies and sometimes that energy can be so powerful, it can cause disturbances in a home. Remember...we can move mountains with our mind, if we knew how to utilize our full mind power, we only utilize a small portion of our minds. Walter B. Gibson, the author of the 30s / 40s pulp hero The Shadow thought of his creation so much that the guests of his home would actually see The Shadow lurking around his house! Now that was a powerful mind!

On this Friday night, May 4, 2007, I joined fellow H.P.I. (Haunted and Paranormal Investigations) of Northern California paranormal investigator Cherie Vincent. We went to St. John Baptist Church Cemetery in Folsom, California. Cherie amazingly picks up many EVPs from this cemetery. Using a video camera, we picked up some dancing orbs over graves. At one time I asked to have my ponytail pulled. That didn't happen, but I did feel a light brushing across my leg, this occurred about 4 times. Cherie felt a slight tugging on her hair. The EVPs that we picked up were the following:
Cherie: Where are you? EVP male voice: I'm above the trees.
Paul: Is there life elsewhere? EVP male voice: Maybe.
Cherie tells me in a whisper, when we were about to leave the cemetery: Let's go. EVP male voice: I can read your mind.

Winchester Mansion

I have been to this cemetery with Cherie before during the day and we had more EVPs during the day, than we did at night. In fact during the day, when I asked to be touched, I felt a burning sensation on my leg, that bled, then bruised. The bruise looked later like a thumb print. Before we left, Cherie thought she heard someone call her name and asked if it was me that called her name. I told her 'no', I was on the other side of the cemetery when she heard her name called.

During stakeouts for ghosts, things can get extremely boring, so I bring along some good reading material and share it with the other ghost hunters. My favorite books for ghost hunt stakeouts are: After Dark - A Collection of Horror by horror novelist Jeani Rector, her website is: www.afterdarknovel.com. The Key of it All - An Encyclopedic Guide to the Sacred Languages & Magickal Systems of the World - Book Two: The Western Mysteries and of course the very first book...Book One: The Eastern Mysteries by David Allen Hulse. His website is: http://www.geocities.com/d_a_hulse/ David was the influence to Sandman comic book creator Neil Gaiman and Carlos Santana has been known to read his books! Other books that I find fascinating for ghost hunts are: Arnis Self-Defense - Stick, Blade, and Empty-Hand Combat - Techniques of the Philippines and Comprehensive Self-Defense by Jose G. Paman. It's important to have some good reading material when you go on ghost hunts, because the stakeouts can be long, tedious and boring, but the final results can be very exciting! Happy ghost hunting to everyone with a strong interest into the unknown! Learn more about H.P.I. at: www.HPIparanormal.net
